These programs also aim at instilling fortitude in the young minds to take up research and competitive examinations like NET / SLET / GATE. Many students get fellowships from organizations like Indian National Science Academy for summer projects and are encouraged to complete their final project work in premier institutes like Center for Cellular and Molecular

For example some students of the Department of Biology, Indian Institute of Science, National Institute of Immunology, to name a few; are awarded student fellowships to go abroad for their project work in reputed research institutions.

In recognition of the meritorious contributions and generous funds received to the tune of Rs.90 Crores so far, for research projects in different disciplines, the University has established centers for: 1) High Pressure Research, 2) Nonlinear Dynamics, 3) Nano-Science and Nanotechnology 4) Remote Sensing 5) Geographic Information Technology, 6) Bioinorganic Chemistry and 7) Pheromone Technology in the various departments.

BDU - BDC

In consonance with the current view that Institutions of Higher Learning should open out to global competition and move towards self-sustenance through external cash flow, an independent unit called Bharathidasan University Business Development Centre (BDU-BDC) has been established. Within the short span of four years the BDC has facilitated many reputed Industries / Institutions to sign memorandum of understanding (MoU) with the University on various aspects.

INSTITUTE OF ENTERPRENUERSHIP AND CAREER DEVELOPMENT (IECD)

The IECD, established as an autonomous institute aims to serve the formal and nonformal community on low cost and low technology basis. Designing its own need based syllabi, it offers more than 100 short term programs which are completely job or enterprenuership oriented. The courses are offered through onsite and offsite modes. In this line the non-student force of the University area is also immensely benefitted. The IECD also organizes campus recruitments for students in different disciplines inviting prospective employers.

PATENT CELL

Patent is an index of intellectual contribution. Researchers should come away from the traditional motto of "Publish or Perish" to "Patent and Protect" their research findings. Some of the papers published from the university have international acclaim but so far only nine products have been patented. Hence, to pave the way for external cash flow to augment the sustenance of the Institution and sensitize the staff and students about the significance and potentials, a patent cell has been established and is functioning since April, 2009.

PART A
SECTION I - GENERAL ENGLISH COMPREHENSION

Comprehension Passage :

A class is an organisation of students who have been brought together with the main purpose of being educated. Similar to any other organisation, it must be directed and controlled in order to achieve its objectives efficiently. The difficult but exacting job of directing and controlling the class belongs to the teacher. It is naïve to assume that the class can administer itself. At times, it is a good experience for the students to administer themselves in the classroom but even on these occasions, it should be done under the direction of a management expert -The teacher -to keep it from setting out of control.

As the management expert of the class, the teacher uses his authority and leadership as twin keys to classroom management. Teacher authority does not mean autocratic, domineering behaviour and overt use of power. There is a world of difference between teacher's authority as a quality that pervades all the activities of a teacher and authoritarian behaviour. Teacher authority as a quality indicates the difference between a smoothly operating classroom and one which is out to control. Teacher authority, as research studies have indicated, is at the heart of successful group management.

The teacher as the leader of a group of students exerts his influence, his care and concern and his advice and guidance to manage the classroom. Therefore, the concept of classroom management is more broad-based, involving the principles of management relating to instruction, its related activities and discipline.
